

Thursday, May 3, 2007

GOP Debate - Important Stuff

I saw some actual potential Presidents.

I'll tell you who doesn't get there though, at least for me.

John McCain.

"Come together more" and "reach across the aisle"?

Sorry McCain, that's not how it works as far as I'm concerned. You either have a set of principles you stand on, or you do not. You just lost my vote.

There are things to like about all of these candidates, with one of the more impressive ones being Mr. Huckabee. And on what do I say that? One thing - he supports The Fair Tax.

As for Ron Paul, I love 'ya guy, but you just lost my vote. Imprisoning Scooter Libby not because of what he did, but for an unindicted and unconvicted offense, which is what you want to keep him in jail for, disqualifies you from consideration. Sorry. If you can bring charges and convict him then have it - but we are a nation of laws, not men.

There's more of course, but you really ought to see if you can snarf a copy of it and watch it....

Posted by Karl Denninger at 21:08

Dismissing Ron Pauls because of Scooter Libby? You are so deep! I guess the facts like: he is an MD, former USAF Officer, never voted for a tax increase, wants to eliminate the IRS, wants to stop policing the worlds are non issues. Anonymous on May 22 2007, 04:33

The most important issue is respect for the rule of law. Ron Paul obviously does not have it, and this disqualifies him as President. Oh, and let's add "he's unelectable" to the mix. Anonymous on May 22 2007, 08:39