

Wednesday, April 4, 2007

Iran Pardons British Sailors

"TEHRAN, Iran - Iranian President Mahmoud Ahmadinejad announced Wednesday that his government would release the detained 15 British sailors and marines as a gift to the British people. " (Story)

Uh huh. Gift eh?

Maybe he heard Tony Blair's comment that the next 48 hours would be critical?

Or maybe it was the Russian "leak" that Britain intended to blast them on Good Friday (which, by the way, was probably total propaganda without a shred of truth to it.)

Who knows. But - the sailors are coming home, which is good news.

Now we just have to go flatten those nuke plants.

Before Iran vaporizes Tel Aviv.

Posted by Karl Denninger at 09:28